

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This research provides the conclusion and suggestion about this research with the titled: The English Foreign Language (EFL) students' interests in learning reading at the English Study Program at Universitas Jambi.

5.1 Conclusion

Based on the data that have been collected by the researcher through the instrument of questionnaire, it can be concluded that the English Foreign Language (EFL) students' interests in learning reading at the English Study Program at Universitas Jambi is situational interest where the mean score was 3,90. Then, followed by topic interest where the mean score was 3,80 and the lowest was 3,7 and this came from individual interest. This might happen because English is a foreign language in Indonesia, so that the students just have limit time to practice reading by themselves, so they will be motivated or interest to read just in certain situation and condition around them.

5.2 Suggestions

Based on the conclusion of the research, the suggestions are:

- a. For the students, through this research it is suggested that the students could know and understand their attitudes of interest in learning English especially reading, so that it can help them to increase their English ability especially for the reading.

- b. For the other researcher, this research can be a reference to conduct a further research with a same topic but different limitation such as samples, research methodology, etc.