This study analysed translation strategies of slang words in Prison Break's first-season movie. A mixed method was used to examine this research. The translation strategies used by the writer are based on Mona Baker's theory. The result of this study shows that there are seven strategies that the translator used to translate English slang words into Indonesian subtitles. The researcher used some online dictionaries to find out the meaning of the slang expression. The most common type of translation strategy is a translation by paraphrasing using unrelated words with 23 sources. They were followed by translation using a related word 16 sources, a more general word, a less expressive word, and translation using a loan word one source.
